13.a4 Embarking on a misguided plan of returning my extra pawn, in return for a better pawn structure and exchange of my weak light squared bishop for White's stronger bishop. However, my lack of development was a fatal flaw of this plan. 13...Na5?

[Nd8 was an excellent idea discovered by Stockfish which uncover a dual attack on the isolated a and c pawns and simultaneously preventing Nc4. Here is a possible line which guarantees Black at least equality.

Although my pawn structure is superior, and I have the better bishop, I am seriously lagging in development and mistakenly thought I could quickly develop my kingside pieces. For example, if the queen captures the b-pawn immediately, I achieve comfortable equality. The rook capture was more challenging, but thought that I could eventually equalize. I completely failed to consider quiet developing moves such as Nd4 and the superior Be3 that was played which completely wrecked my position. 18.Be3!

1.e4 c5 This opponent has always played the French against 1.e4 before now, so this came as a surprise. 2.Nf3 a6 3.c3 A different O'Kelly player at the club told me once that ...c3 is the most practically annoying move for him to face, so I opted to transpose into an Alapin here instead of going for a Maroczy setup. 3...d5 4.exd5 Qxd5 5.d4 cxd4?!± This allows my knight to develop to c3 with tempo. 6.cxd4 Nf6 7.Nc3 Qd8 8.d5?! I'm still clearly losing but at least White has to worry a little bit about king safety now.) 28...Bc5 29.Ra1 (I think I was down to seconds on the clock at this point, the rest of the game is played on increment.) 29...Rxcg2 30.Nxa7+ Kd7 31.Rab1 Rd8 32.Bxe5 Nxe5+ 33.Rxe5 Rxh2 34.Nb5 Rf8 (Things are becoming a bit tricky for White.) 35.Rbe1 Rf3+ 36.Ke4 Rg3 (My opponent says he thought he saw a checkmate here but miscalculated. I thought about it but had barely more than 30 seconds to calculate. I saw that White could capture the bishop and then prevent the g-pawn from promoting immediately with Nd4+ followed by Nf3, but I didn't have enough time to figure out if the knight could hold off both pawns. (EW: It can't.) I had to make a move with only a few seconds remaining and decided to retreat the bishop instead. My opponent then resigned.) 55...Bd8 0-1
