 spent some time thinking about either taking and helping Black develop and going queenside but allows me to castle kingside quickly or retreat the bishop on e7 and tell White his knight is misplaced.
 I went for the practical option 8...Bxd2+ [8...Be7 9.0-0 d5 And I am able to play the freeing d5]

9.Qxd2 0-0 10.f4! This is when I realized that dropping the bishop to e7 two moves earlier and play a quick d5 would have been practically easier for Black. White's attack is to play e5. I spent a lot of time calculating e5 (leading to a weak d7 pawn after) or d6 and enter a Scheveningen structure where I am solid but settled for an inferior developing move 10...Nc6?!
 This is probably my only real "mistake"
 in the game as I allow e5
